Kathryn Lee Koestner focuses her practice on construction law, representing owners, contractors, and subcontractors in all phases of construction litigation. She routinely handles complex matters in construction-related disputes. Before joining the firm, she represented clients in a range of matters involving construction defects and insurance defense litigation. Kathryn earned her Juris Doctor from the Barry University Dwayne O. Andreas School of Law, where she received a book award in Motions and Depositions. Prior to her legal career, she proudly served her country as a Small Arms & Artillery Specialist, in the United States Army. She loves spending her free time with her wife, their golden retriever (Chief) walking around downtown Sanford, on the St. Johns River, or traveling somewhere new.
